

The ISSUES

- Wild parrots are under threat.

Parrots are the world's most at-risk birds with nearly one in three species now threatened in the wild. Capture for the live-bird trade, habitat loss and other factors imperil wild parrot populations.

- Long-lived companion birds need better care.

Parrots are popular companion animals that are cherished for their beauty and intelligence. Numbering in the tens of millions in captivity, they are long-lived creatures with complex care issues which are poorly understood. Too few people provide adequate care for their companions and consequently many parrots suffer, living shortened and deprived lives.

The SOLUTION

- The World Parrot Trust

Our organization was created to help parrots survive in the wild and thrive in your home.

Over two decades WPT has grown into a global movement of people helping parrots recover in the wild, and empowering caregivers to provide companion parrots with healthy and enriched lives.

You can be part of the solution too, by supporting our conservation, education and parrot welfare efforts.

"IF MAN CAN SAVE THE PARROTS,
HE MAY YET SAVE HIMSELF"

The World Parrot Trust is dedicated to saving parrots from extinction. We are an international leader in science-based, results-oriented parrot conservation and welfare efforts. Since 1989, we've aided more than 50 species in over 30 countries.

Our Focus: Conservation, Welfare & Education. By building strong ties with partner organizations around the globe, WPT has developed field programs and guided conservation actions to help dozens of species of endangered parrots.

WPT has helped to return thousands of parrots to the wild and saved millions more by working to eliminate the trade in wild-caught birds. We have supported the purchase of critical habitat areas, encouraged sustainable ecotourism and worked with governments, organizations and conservationists to protect wild birds.

We deliver the most current and engaging parrot information available, reaching tens of thousands of caring parrot enthusiasts each month with our publications and online resources.
